HEY, FIRST-YEARS! COME WRITE-IN

Are you feeling a little unsure about how you're going to finish all of your projects this semester? Join your fellow first-year students for a dedicated work-session, called a write-in. To help you, we will have a librarian and a writing center tutor at the event from 7—10 pm and we will have snacks and coffee available until midnight. If that's not enough to entice you: you will also be entered to win door prizes sponsored by the First-Year Cabinet!

First-Year Write-In
Tuesday, November 27th
7 pm—midnight
Hollins Room, Library
Writing Center Tutors and Librarian available until 10 pm
Snacks, coffee, and tea provided
Door prizes!

Set some time aside to tackle your projects!

Questions? Contact Rebecca Seipp, Outreach Librarian, at seippri@hollins.edu. The First-Year Write-In is sponsored by the library and the First-Year Cabinet.

PRICE WATERHOUSE V. HOPKINS:

ARCHIVES CONTAIN PAPERS FROM HISTORIC GENDER DISCRIMINATION CASE

In 1982 and 1983 Hollins alumna Ann Hopkins '65 was denied a partnership at Price Waterhouse despite demonstrated excellence in her work and positive recommendations from two superiors. After her second denial she filed a sex discrimination claim with the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission, which eventually went to the Supreme Court. Price Waterhouse v. Hopkins became a landmark case that helped to expand workplace discrimination laws to include gender stereotyping.

The library currently holds a collection of material related to the case. The Ann Branigar Hopkins Papers includes numerous newspaper and periodical articles that document the journey from beginning to end, court transcripts, personal and professional correspondence, materials related to her book So Ordered: Making Partner the Hard Way, a scrapbook album, and other papers. The collection date ranges from 1984-2001. In addition, Hopkins' personal correspondence (1965-1989) with a former Hollins professor is located in the Julia Randall Papers.

To view the papers, contact Beth Harris, Archivist and Special Collections Librarian, at bharris@hollins.edu or 540-362-6237.

YEWNO

Yewno (pronounced: you-know) is a concept mapping tool designed to help you do preliminary research on a topic and to help you create interdisciplinary connections between concepts. Users can search one broad topic to see related content, or search for two concepts and see the links between them. We recommend using Yewno to help you start a project and brainstorm potential avenues for research.

There are two ways you can access Yewno:

1. From the library homepage, click on "Articles & Databases" and use the A-Z listing.
2. Yewno is listed in the "refine my results" section of the OneSearch results page. It is listed below "External Search".

We will close at 4:00 pm on December 20th for the winter break and will reopen on January 2, 2019 at 8:00 am.

ONESEARCH TIP

As your projects kick into high gear, it's important to know that you're making the best use of your research time. Did you know that there are links in OneSearch to search outside the library's databases?

Google Scholar is a free Google search engine designed to search scholarly literature that is indexed by Google.

WorldCat is the closest thing we have to a worldwide library catalog. If you are looking for books and not finding what you need in our collection, it's a good idea to use WorldCat because it will expand your search to other libraries. Remember: you can always request titles we don't have through InterLibrary Loan (ILL). When you are searching WorldCat on campus an ILL link should show up on the database page once you click on a title.

Yewno is also listed—see the red box above to learn more about our new database!

Use the "External Search" filter on the left-side of the results page to access these additional resources.
